WILLIAM O'GRADY teaches linguistics at the University of Hawaii at Manoa and is the author of several scholarly books. His research focuses on syntactic theory, language acquisition, and Korean. JOHN ARCHIBALD in addition to teaching linguistics at the University of Calgary, studies the acquisition of phonology and has written several books on the subject. MARK ARONOFF is professor of linguistics at Stony Brook University and was President of the Linguistic Society of America for 2005. He has written numerous articles and several books on aspects of linguistic morphology, as well as on orthography and the teaching of linguistics. JANIE REES-MILLER is director of the English as a Second Language program at Marietta College, Ohio. In research and teaching, she is concerned with the interface between theory and practice and with making linguistics accessible to nonlinguists. She is coeditor with Mark Aronoff of The Handbook of Linguistics. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

I bought this along with the main textbook to brush up on the basics before starting a new linguistics program and I am so glad I did. While I use a different textbook for class, this is nice to have around for additional practice exercises. If you are studying linguistics on your own and are thinking of getting this, you probably should. And while you don't NEED the main text to complete most of the work in here, it's a pretty good text and you might as well just get both. Live a little.

required for class
