Jacqueline A. Soule is a botanist and garden writer from Tucson. She has developed strong expertise as a gardener in the Southwest. As a garden writer, Soule has contributed more than a thousand gardening columns for local, regional, and national newspapers and magazines, and she has written or been the technical writer for numerous gardening books. Soule teamed up with the Tierra del Sol Institute to develop its Arizona Gardening Series, consisting of Butterfly Gardening in Southern Arizona (2012) and Success With Succulents (2013). She is the author of Southwest Fruit & Vegetable Gardening (Cool Springs Press). When she's not writing gardening columns or books, Soule is a speaker and educator, offering a wide array of plant-related workshops, classes, and other programs throughout southern Arizona, including through OASIS Tucson. She loves to landscape with plants that require as little care as possible. Many of the plants in her books were test grown in her own yard.

Good Book, a lot of information.

This book is fantastic! I thought I would just dip into it here and there, but the introduction got me hooked and I started to simply read it! This author really understands desert gardening. She understands our trouble with alkaline soils, our issues of low humidity. And wind! Furthermore - I greatly appreciate her style of imparting information. She doesn't talk down to the reader, or get preachy, nor is it too "sciencey" for me. It's almost like talking with an old friend about gardening and sharing tips for what works. I also like the "Pests" section - she has organic solutions. Finally, the Resources section is a real gold mine of where to go to get things for our gardens. Keep up the good work.
